Summary:

Talking points for Arms Control and Disarmament Agency Director Hollum from the State Department. Hollum was instructed to "urge" the Japanese to convey their concern to the government of India and "strong opposition [to] any such tests." The State Department did not want to make any public statements about the situation because that "would be counterproductive," that is, it would tip the U.S.'s hand Japan to tell Tokyo to voice its concerns over the possible Indian Nuclear Test to New Delhi.
